

Light-field Monotype

By Tobi Meuwissen

Find out how to create a light-filed monotype. This type of print is made by painting ink directly onto a plate with a paintbrush to create a monotype. Try this activity with ages 8 and up.

What We Like About This Resource...

“We really enjoyed reading about the process of creating art work according to a design brief and how the experience of this differs to when an artist begins with their own idea or concept. That’s not to say an artist can’t approach a brief with their own individual style and ideas, but what this post shows us is that there can be a balance between the two. This would be a great resource to show older KS pupils who may be beginning to consider their options beyond Primary School". – Rachel, AccessArt

Finding Marks Through Drawings Made by Artists

By Paula Briggs

This resource shares a way to introduce learners to the diversity of mark making at their disposal when making drawings. By deconstructing drawings made by artists, we can begin to build our own vocabulary of marks, and start to make our own creative decisions about when to use a certain mark in a particular context, and understand how the marks we choose will affect the final drawings.

Many thanks to accessArt Young Artist
Rowan Briggs Smith

The image shows the words "Young Artists" written in a highly stylized, cursive script. The letters are thick and filled with a dense pattern of diagonal hatching lines, giving them a three-dimensional, ink-like appearance. The word "Young" is on the top line and "Artists" is on the bottom line, with the letters of "Artists" overlapping slightly with those of "Young". The overall style is reminiscent of a calligraphic or sketchy drawing.

Nursery Night Time Collage

Inspired by the AccessArt Village, artist Rachel Thompson works with pre-school aged children in St Matthew's Nursery School, Cambridge to make their very own night time scenes with collage and wax-resist.
