

Show Me The Shadows

By Paula Briggs

At the AccessArt Art Club for ages 8, 9 and 10, I wanted to spend a few weeks giving children the opportunity to brush up (forgive the pun!) on a few seeing, drawing and painting skills around the theme of still life.

This is the first resource in this series and explores how we can encourage children to see tonal values in relation to each other, and to be able to communicate those values on paper. This was an hour long session.

Watching a continuous line drawing being made

To Begin

Each child was given a simple object, in this case an orange, on a white sheet of paper, plus additional paper and a sharp B pencil.

I invited the children to make a continuous line drawing of the fruit, but to make sure they included the lines made made by the shadow in the drawing. The aim of this was to help encourage the children to see the shadows as having equal importance to the object.

How to Make a Simple Origami Bird by Melanie Johns

Melanie Johns suggests using origami to transform old artwork. It's an exciting way of using less successful drawings or paintings on paper to produce a new creative outcome, in the form of a personalised paper sculpture.

Exploration of Watercolour in the Studio

After having studied watercolour paintings at the Fitzwilliam Museum Cambridge with AccessArt, teachers were invited to undertake their own exploration of working with watercolour, including colour mixing, paint techniques, and intention. This resource shares the processes and outcomes of the practical studio session.
