

World War 1 And The Work Of Paul Nash

By Katherine Woodard.

Katherine currently teaches A Level Fine Art and GCSE at an International Sixth Form boarding school and KS2 Art and Design at a Primary school.

In this post, Teacher Katherine Woodard talks through an extended project exploring the work of Paul Nash. Nash was a 20th century surrealist Landscape Painter and War Artist, and Katherine makes the latter her focus in this post.

What We Like About This Resource...

“The research phase of a creative project can be presented in many different ways, and can even be an art form in itself. Here, Tatyana demonstrates how her sketchbooks became a medium through which she expressed her thoughts, refined her ideas and explored materials. We believe sketchbooks to be a powerful tool for children to take ownership of their ideas and travel on their own creative journey, without necessarily knowing the destination. Take a look at our sketchbook journey for more sketchbook inspiration” – Rachel, AccessArt.

What We Love About This Resource...

So often, we hear talk of the distinction between science and art, and no more so when teenagers proceed through their education and they are encouraged to choose one route or another. In reality, creative thinking helps scientific understanding and a scientific approach can inform and inspire art.

It's so refreshing to read and see Merlin's experience and understand how she works between these two areas – in her words “mixing subjects, and seeing how they work and intersect is where inventions take place!”

We also love the way her work embraces the felt world of being human, as well as the known world. We're sure many young people will find Merlin's work of interest and reassuring when they are pressured to choose “art or science”.
