

Kate Noble

Kate Noble

Kate Noble holds a PhD in the Development of Visual Literacy in Young Children, and a BEd Art and Early Years Education, both from the University of Cambridge. Kate runs the Schools Programme at The Fitzwilliam Museum which helps teachers and school groups make the most out of visits to the museums, and leads a teacher training programme that encourages the development of creative teaching, using objects and images. Kate also works as Education Researcher at The National Gallery.

Email

See Resources Below...