Using the Resources on AccessArt

AccessArt believes in sharing ideas as a way of inspiring new audiences.

We believe strongly that if we share examples of excellent practice in visual arts education, then we can all benefit. Teachers, facilitators, artists and learners can all feed into and out of this inspirational pot of ideas.

Subscribers and members of AccessArt are able to use the resources featured on this site in their own practice, and in their educational work with other audiences (for example pupils, students, community audiences etc).

Where possible and appropriate, please acknowledge AccessArt, and/or the artist educators sharing ideas, especially if you make reference online to sessions you have run which have been inspired by our resources, for example if you post images of your workshops on your website or facebook, please consider mentioning AccessArt.
